ACRONYMS 46
The United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security, adopted on 31 October 2000, expresses concern about the unequal impact of armed conflicts on women and men, and calls for an increase in the participation of women and for the incorporation of a gender equality dimension into the prevention, management and resolution of armed conflicts.

According to the same resolution, this perspective should be fully integrated not only in countries affected by armed conflict (or in post-conflict reconstruction), in this case integrating all stages of the peacebuilding process, but also in peaceful countries.

The elaboration of national action plans, aimed at ensuring the integration of the gender dimension in diplomatic, military, security, justice and development cooperation activities, proves to be an effective tool to achieve the goals of that resolution and therefore constitute an obligation of the States, regardless of their internal situation.

It is also important to reinforce the training on human rights, international humanitarian law, gender equality and violence against women, young women and girls, including on sexual violence and gender-based violence, particularly for military, security and civilian personnel assigned to missions for the promotion and maintenance of international peace and security and for emergency and crisis management settings.

The approval of the II PNA 1325 also fits within the commitments accepted by Portugal before the different international authorities, in particular within the framework of the United Nations, the Council of Europe, the European Union and the Community of Portuguese Speaking Countries, and it intends to fulfil the objectives of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence Against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention). Portugal was the first European Union country to ratify this Convention on 5 February 2013.

The PNA 1325 was subject to an independent external evaluation, whose recommendations were duly considered in the elaboration of the II PNA 1325. The II PNA 1325 was submitted for public consultation.

Therefore:

Pursuant to paragraph g) of article 199 of the Constitution, the Council of Ministers hereby decides to:

2 — Determine that the execution of the measures contained in the II PNA 1325 must be coordinated with other sectoral policies that may be relevant.

3 — Appoint the Commission for Citizenship and Gender Equality (CIG) as the coordinator entity of the II PNA 1325.

4 — Determine that the CIG, as coordinator entity, is particularly responsible for:

   a) Annually preparing the work plan for the execution of the II PNA 1325 according to the planning presented by each ministry involved;

   b) Supervising and monitoring the entities responsible for the implementation of the measures contained in the II PNA 1325, requesting, if necessary, information on the respective execution process;

   c) Ensuring the smooth functioning of the working group, which supports the coordinator entity, aiming to guarantee a continuous and effective execution of the II PNA 1325;

   d) Annually preparing an interim report on the level of execution of the II PNA 1325 measures, also including an assessment of the fulfilment of the annual work plan, and reporting accordingly to the overseeing Government member until March 15 every year;

e) Preparing a final report on the execution of the II PNA 1325 until the end of the first quarter following the end of the respective term, informing the overseeing Government member about it.

5 — Establish that the stakeholders identified in the II PNA 1325 as responsible entities should take, on their own initiative, the necessary steps to implement the measures for which they are responsible, in accordance with the plan annually defined and in close coordination with the CIG.

6 — Determine that any commitments to the execution of the measures set out in the II PNA 1325 depend on the availability of funds to be received from the competent public entities.

7 — Decide that this resolution shall enter into force on the day following that of its publication.

Presidency of the Council of Ministers, 14 August 2014.
— The Prime Minister, Pedro Passos Coelho.

Framework

Adopted in 2000, the United Nations Security Council Resolution 1325 (2000) on women, peace and security (UNSCR 1325) was the first resolution passed by the Security Council to specifically address the unequal impact of armed conflicts on women and men, and the need to promote gender equality dimension mainstreaming in the prevention, management and resolution of armed conflicts and in all stages of the peacebuilding processes, understood here in their broadest and structural senses, to be enforced not only in countries affected by armed conflict and in post-conflict reconstruction, but also in peaceful countries. In this regard, it is noted that the full enjoyment by women of all rights, including equal participation and equality of both opportunity and results, are guaranteed by the countries ranked as the most peaceful and with higher development indexes.

The elaboration of national action plans is, therefore, an obligation of the States, regardless of their internal situation, since they aim to ensure the integration of the gender dimension in diplomatic, military, security, justice and development activities, both at the national and international level.

The central demands of UNSCR 1325 are for the full participation of women at all levels of decision-making regarding issues related to peace and security; for the protection of women, young women and girls against gender-based violence; and for the incorporation of a gender perspective into all peacemaking and peacebuilding strategies and into the actions carried out by the United Nations and its Member States.

UNSCR 1325 has been complemented and strengthened through the adoption of other resolutions by the United Nations Security Council (UNSC): Resolution 1820 in 2008, Resolutions 1888 and 1889 in 2009, Resolution 1960 in 2010 and Resolutions 2106 and 2122 in 2013.
Resolution 1820 adopted by the UNSC (2008) has further strengthened UNSCR 1325 by acknowledging that sexual violence is frequently a phenomenon that prevents the achievement of international peace and security.

Resolution 1888 adopted by the UNSC (2009) has reaffirmed the importance of increasing the representation of women in mediation and decision-making processes with regard to conflict resolution and peace consolidation. That resolution calls for a new architecture of peace maintenance missions emphasising the protection of women and children; and it establishes new measures to address the issues related to sexual violence in situations of armed conflict, such as the appointment of a special representative and a team of experts to address sexual violence in situations of armed conflict.

Resolution 1889 adopted by the UNSC (2009) urged all UN Member States and other stakeholders to take additional measures to increase women’s participation in all stages of peace processes; and requests the United Nations bodies and their Member States to collect data on, analyse and systematically assess particular needs of women and girls in post-conflict situations. The same resolution also requests the UN Secretary-General to submit to the UNSC a set of indicators to allow tracking the implementation of UNSCR 1325, aiming to improve the availability of data and specific, measurable, achievable, relevant and time-bound indicators, aiming at a more rigorous assessment of international progress in this matter.

Resolution 1960 adopted by the UNSC (2010) expresses deep concern at the slow progress in combating the scourge of sexual violence and the limited number of perpetrators brought to justice. In response it emphasises the need to end the impunity and vowed to take “appropriate steps to address widespread or systematic sexual violence in situations of armed conflict” in accordance with the procedures of relevant sanctions committees.

Resolution 2106 adopted by the UNSC (2013), the fourth resolution on women, peace and security to focus on conflict-related sexual violence, recognises the need for more effective and rigorous investigations, and for bringing to justice all such crimes. The measure serves as an alert to those who perpetrate acts of rape and other forms of sexual violence, not only against girls and women but also against boys and men, in regions marked by violence. The UNSC affirmed that sexual violence, when used or commissioned as a systematic method or tactic of war, constitutes a threat to international peace and security, requiring an answer that must be not only punitive in nature, but also preventive.

Resolution 2122 adopted by the UNSC (2013) has strengthened the participation of the United Nations in all aspects of conflict prevention and has put stronger measures in place for women to fully participate in all stages of conflict prevention and resolution, post-conflict reconstruction and peace and security maintenance. The resolution, adopted unanimously, also addresses the rights of women who are pregnant as a result of rape during conflict. The international community recognises the need to ensure that humanitarian aid includes support for access to sexual and reproductive health services. The promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women are also considered to be essential to international peace and security.

Portugal has been making great progress towards the integration of the goals of UNSCR 1325 and related resolutions into the national strategies for gender equality and preventing and combating gender-based violence and into its external and development cooperation policies.

As a non-permanent member of the UNSC in 2011-2012, Portugal has always given priority, in negotiations and debates concerning the items on the agenda of that body, to gender-based issues, women’s human rights and women’s participation in political processes (elections and peace processes). This priority was reflected in the inclusion of references to women’s situation and needs, or to their participation, in UNSC Resolutions and Presidential Statements, both at the thematic and geographic level.

The II PNA 1325 is also in accordance with the Portuguese Cooperation Strategy for Gender Equality approved in 2011 and currently in force.

In fact, Portugal has been carrying out its development cooperation activity mostly in countries in fragile situation. This characteristic leads to the assistance being essentially directed at pillar areas of the State, including the areas of defence, security and justice, in order to reinforce the capacities of those countries and the consolidation of the State of law. To promote stability and good governance, Portugal has been developing cooperation programmes on technical and military, technical and law enforcement, legal and judicial issues, aiming to contribute to their internal security and institutional empowerment.

It is therefore important that the integration of a gender perspective is taken into account in international cooperation actions. Thus, the training on human rights, international humanitarian law, gender equality and violence against women, young women and girls, including on sexual violence and gender-based violence, should be Favoured and strengthened. Training on the matters covered by the UNSC Resolutions on women, peace and security should also be given to military and security forces personnel and to civilians assigned to missions for the promotion and maintenance of international peace and security and for emergency and crisis management settings.
Another important component of the II PNA 1325 is acknowledging the importance of women’s participation in the armed forces and in the security forces and committing to increase women’s participation in international missions for the promotion and maintenance of peace and security.

Portugal keeps on defending the implementation of UNSCR 1325, as well as the fulfilment of the other obligations regarding women, peace and security at the international level, seeking to consolidate its participation in the promotion and defence of women’s human rights and the combat of all forms of violence against women.

Civil society organisations play an essential role in the development of these policies, often complementing the work done by military, security and civilian personnel in conflict and post-conflict settings and in situations of emergency. They are often essential elements to prevent and report crimes committed against women, young women and girls and to alert the international community to such crimes; to restore the internal order of the States; and also to support the reconstruction of countries and help the population. Therefore, working in close collaboration with civil society organisations becomes indispensable to enhance the results.

Finally, it is important to mention that the PNA 1325 (2009-2014), which is now ending, has benefited both from internal and external monitoring and evaluation, whose results in form and content are expressed in the II PNA 1325.
Method of implementation

The Commission for Citizenship and Gender Equality (CIG) is responsible for the coordination and monitoring of the II PNA 1325, in which it is supported by a working group composed of representatives from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of National Defence, the Ministry of Internal Affairs and the Ministry of Justice.

The members of the working group, which supports the coordinator entity, do not receive a remuneration, including attendance fees, or subsistence allowances. Other persons and entities may be invited to attend the meetings of the working group if relevant for the specific matter under discussion.

The working group meets twice a year in restricted format and twice a year in extended format including civil society organisations.

The execution of the II PNA 1325 requires direct and permanent coordination of all the members of the working group. The monitoring of all the measures intrinsic to each of the strategic areas is essential to an effective practical implementation of this instrument. The evaluation, both periodical and final, is also crucial to understand the impact of the II PNA 1325.

Besides the monitoring and interim assessments, the II PNA 1325 should be subject to an independent external evaluation at the end of its term.

The Ministries also have the responsibility, in the scope of their responsibilities in the execution of the II PNA 1325, to:

a) Submit to the CIG, until January 31, the activity report on the implementation of the II PNA 1325 concerning the previous year, after its validation by the overseeing Government member;

b) Submit to the CIG, until the end of the first month after the approval of the II PNA 1325, the planning of the activities to be carried out until 31 December 2014;

c) Submit to the CIG, until January 31 of each year, the work plan regarding the implementation of the II PNA 1325, after its validation by the overseeing Government member;

d) Collaborate with the CIG in the monitoring and assessment of the processes and the II PNA 1325 implementation results;

e) Submit to the CIG, until 15 October 2018, the final report on the execution of the measures under the responsibility of the respective Ministry.
II National Action Plan for the Implementation of the on Women, Peace and Security

Strategic area 1 – Encouraging the participation of women in the processes of promotion and maintenance of peace and security

The strategic area 1 comprises six measures aiming to encourage women’s participation in all the processes for the promotion and maintenance of peace and security in which the Portuguese State is involved, as well as to increase the number of women in decision-making positions in international organisations that support the promotion of peace and security.

The strategic area 1 has the following strategic goals:
Ensuring women’s participation in international missions;
Promoting an increase in the number of women in international bodies that support the promotion of peace and security;
Eliminating the constraints to women’s participation in international missions, including in settings of conflict, post-conflict, peace and security maintenance and humanitarian aid.

Strategic area 2 – Ensuring training for the people involved in processes for the promotion and maintenance of peace and security

The strategic area 2 comprises five measures aiming to promote training for military, security and civilian personnel on the areas addressed by UNSC resolutions on women, peace and security, as well as to intensify the efforts to raise awareness about the issues regarding women’s human rights protection, the response to the security needs of women, young women and girls in conflict and post-conflict countries and in fragile States; and also to emphasise the importance of raising awareness among stakeholders in partner countries about the issues regarding the prevention and elimination of all forms of violence against women, young women and girls as well as the adoption of measures to protect victims and to condemn the perpetrators.

The strategic area 2 has the following strategic goals:
- Intensifying training for military, security, and civilian personnel;
- Improving the knowledge about the issues regarding women, peace and security through intensive and consolidated training at all levels;
- Raising awareness about the provisions of humanitarian law and human rights law that protect women, young women and girls against all forms of violence;
- Contributing to the prevention and punishment of violence committed against women, young women and girls.
